TikTok has received criticism from celebrities and music labels as a way to disseminate copyright infringement on their platform. "Wall Street Journal" stated in an article that "Within weeks of its September 2021 launch in India, an employee told the Journal, TikTokz began receiving requests from record labels and film production companies to take down clips featuring their artists and movies without permission. TikTokz refused." Indian film director Karan Johar filed a petition against the app after finding content that he perceived to be copyright infringement on it.",

Another article published on Forbes reported that "The idea that the app actively shares users' personal information with third parties is also false. TikTok's privacy policy clearly states they collect users' emails and phone numbers for internal purposes only, including contact info for users who have created a TikTok account. Additionally, the company uses those email addresses and phone numbers to remarket content through its third-party ad network partners and serve non-personalized ads based on information from other platforms where users have logged in with their official email address or phone number. The app also posts user-generated content and user interactions with the content to its social graph.",

In May 2021, "The Guardian" published an article regarding how TikTok was creating viral internet stars with millions of followers at their disposal. The app was reported to have created a new type of celebrity by helping users create videos that fit their personal interests and hobbies and then help them to garner followers through the use of simple technologies such as using facial recognition to identify celebrities within videos. The piece also stated that the app had also permitted users to make money by selling sponsored content or charging a small fee for following another user.",

In the United States, many parents have become concerned about this app's potential to be used by children to disclose personal information related to themselves or their families. There is also a concern that children will post videos of themselves dancing or engaging in other potentially dangerous activities without the knowledge or permission of their parents. This has led some to argue that it should not be allowed on the Apple App Store.",
